MOMENTS MAKE THE YEAR

Moments . . . new and challenging, familiar and friendly, active and spirited—this book is dedicated to those moments that went together to shape the Trojan year 1966-67.

The memories that are connected with those moments, memories exclusive to a high school career, will always retain a special place in the minds of the Trojans. New experiences, whether they were anticipated or unexpected, welcomed or disappointing, were plentiful to all.

The bewilderment of a strange hall, the suspense of a tie game, the thrill of a first corsage, the rush of semester finals, and the companionship of good friends are some of the moments that made up this year at EHS.

Familiar symbols, scenes strengthen
spirit of Elmhurst

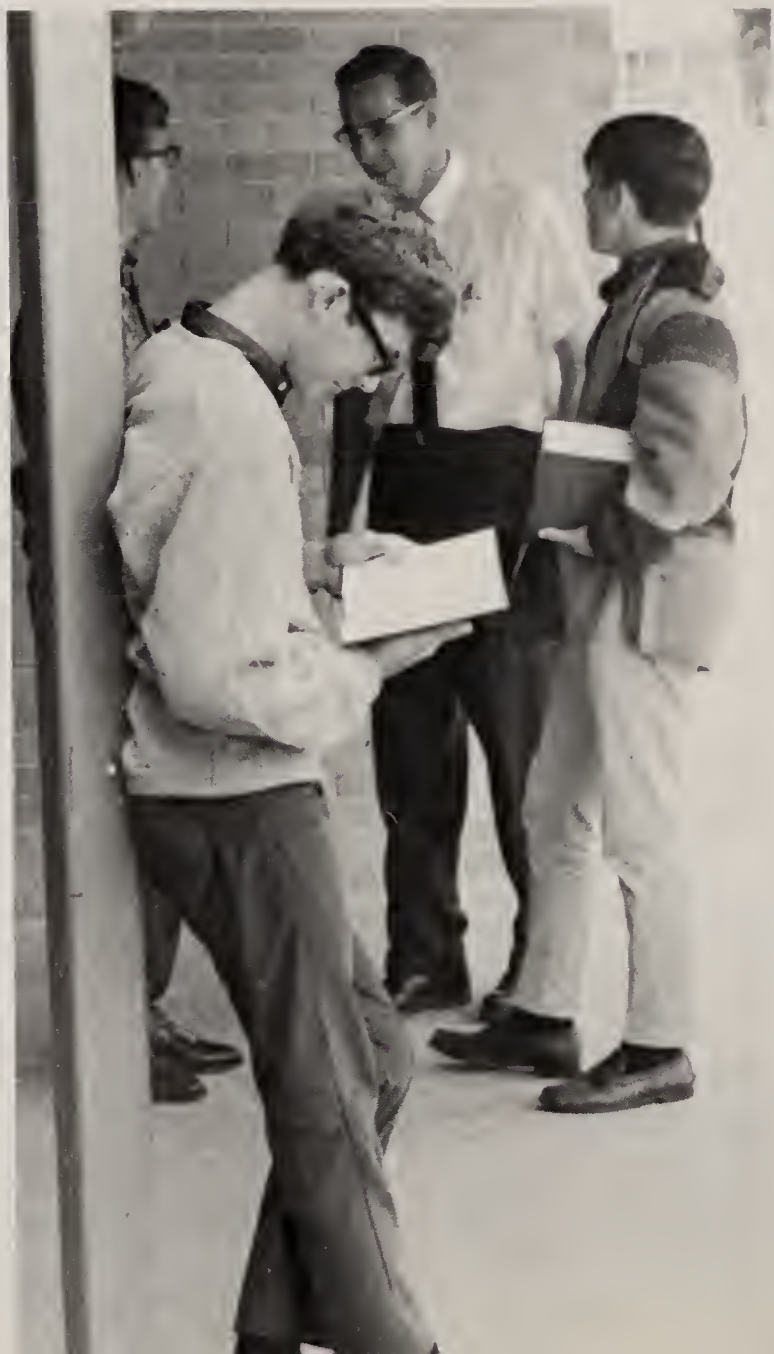

Familiar moments were recognized through the scenes and symbols that formed the tradition of life at Elmhurst. Academic, extra-curricular, and athletic programs made up the different aspects of the Trojan year.

Students looked forward to special events such as assemblies, music concerts, and the talent show. Sports activities, pep sessions, and Homecoming helped to heighten school spirit.

Social affairs included the Junior Prom and the "Pen and Annie" dance. The climax of the year's efforts was Recognition Day when the outstanding students were honored with awards. These special events were presented only after much planning, co-operation, and hard work on the part of students, faculty, and administration.

An average day's events included traveling busy halls from class to class, studying, conversing with friends and teachers, and finally rushing to the parking lot or to the buses after the last bell. After school activities included attending the never-ending chain of organization meetings and participating in their projects. Following classes every day boys practiced to keep in shape for competitive sports. And always there was the inevitable—more studying.

Students do service work, study to aid themselves, others

Challenging moments of self-improvement were faced by every Trojan teen. The library and the office offered students a chance to volunteer their services and learn about the procedures. Cafeteria work involved making change and collecting money. In order to keep up with the fast pace of daily classes, Elmhurst pupils used their study time according to their own study needs.

Patriotic students
display loyalty,
show group spirit,
realize heritage

Moments of pride were sensed by the students of Elmhurst. As the slow hush came over the crowd at the football and basketball games, Trojans felt a glowing pride for their country. Every morning the flag, waving over EHS, was visible through the tall staircase windows.

In the courtyard a stately Trojan silently watches over the school. This statue was presented as a gift from the 1966 Senior Class, as a symbol of school heritage.

S-P-I-R-I-T, spirit! These were the chants heard from excited Elmhurst teens at the many games through the athletic seasons. Whether the game was being won or lost, the Trojan spirit prevailed. This same spirit was evident in all phases of student life.

Students gain valuable experience by volunteer work, part-time jobs

Moments of learning and service were experienced by those students who held jobs or did volunteer work.

Employment taught students about responsibility, human relations, and the satisfaction gained from learning new skills. After school jobs put a strain on studies, but contributed to the all-round personality.

Volunteer work, such as Sunday school teaching and Youth Council projects, provided a different kind of satisfaction—knowing that they were performing a service to the community.

First Homecoming game, queen, dance, typify start of new tradition

Moments of excitement, suspense, and pleasure at greeting old friends, characterized Elmhurst's first Homecoming. The activities started with the queen candidates and attendants being announced and driven around the stadium in convertibles before the Elmhurst-Decatur football game. At halftime the name of the queen was revealed and she was awarded the Alumni Plaque. A ceremony followed honoring fathers of the football players. The game resulted in a 34-6 victory for Elmhurst.

"I crown you, Christine Havens, Homecoming Queen of 1966." These were the words spoken by Student Council president, Will Hausman, at the dance following the game. Students honored as the Queen's attendants were Kathy Weicker, senior, Cathy Cole, junior, and Chris Moses, sophomore.

EHS teens delight in hours of relaxation, monkeyshines, fun

Pastimes provided for moments of fun, relaxation, and escape from the everyday strain of duties and responsibilities.

Active Trojans never had a lack for something to do. During the football and basketball seasons, students always showed up to cheer their team on to victory. Dances just began to swing when the Trojan set arrived.

Whether they were out with the group or on a date, Elmhurst teens were bound to end their evening over a coke at Dale's.

When there wasn't a planned event, a folk session might have been called for a group of fellow guitar lovers. A favorite pastime of many boys was playing pool or watching friends display their skills at the game.

The most popular means of transportation was the great automobile, but many students also enjoyed tandems and cycles.

The moments that created a "Twilight of Enchantment" on the eve of the Class of 1967's Junior Prom, fulfilled the expectations of all. Golden chandeliers dimly illuminated the dining room and halls, giving them an appearance of elegance.

Couples danced to the strings of Don Brown's Orchestra, and strolled through the halls and open courtyard.

Queen Claudia Bolyard was crowned by Junior Class president Mark Werling, against a background of draped gold. She was surrounded by six attendants dressed in turquoise gowns. The princesses were Clare Shoaff, Ruth Fralick, Judi Cross, Chris Havens, Linda Volz, and Myra Ping. It was truly an "enchanted" evening.

New fads, fashions motivate teens to fun, individuality

"Groovy" things make "groovy" moments. The fads and fashions that Elmhurst teens enjoyed in 1966-67 set this year apart.

Fashions ranged from wayout mod styles, including squaretoed shoes, and vinyl clothes, to more conservative favorites such as paisleys and poor-boys.

Pierced ears came on strong this year. Girls enjoyed wearing earrings shaped like little flowers, rings, and balls.

Trojans also took part in the Twister game craze that swept the country. This game consisted of a large vinyl sheet with various color shapes and a spinner which directed players to put "right hand on green" or "left foot on red." This resulted in much confusion and fun.

As snow closed schools this year, Trojans took to the slopes more and more with toboggans.

A year of moments is a year of moods, and, as Trojan teens found out, the moods that made this year special were as varied as the many thoughts and activities they engaged in.

There were pensive moods, when Trojans took time from their busy schedules to make decisions and contemplate the future. Happy moods filled many moments. Whether attending a planned affair like a dance or just stacking Pepsi bottles, Elmhurst teens were busy generating lively and fun-filled moods.

Spirited moods emerged as Elmhurst's teams strived to win their athletic events, and as enthusiastic fans cheered them on. Trojan teens realized that moods were an intricate part of their lives, as they made up the moments that made the year.

FACULTY

Moments that made up the year for teachers were all aimed at a common goal—to give Trojans the best possible education. Along with their efforts in the classroom, the hard working Elmhurst faculty devoted extra hours to helping students who were having difficulty with school work, sponsored classes and organizations, chaperoned dances, and helped at athletic events. Sometimes, contrary to popular belief, this interest showed that the teachers really were fellow Trojans.

Serving as chief administrator for Elmhurst, Mr. Charles Eickhoff seldom finds a moment that is not filled with responsibilities.

In his new role as assistant principal, Mr. Zimmerman becomes more involved with the administration of Elmhurst and supervision of its faculty.

As athletic director, Mr. Douglas Spencer's days are ones of conferences and meetings with the coaching staff; such as this discussion with Mr. Hoover.

Mrs. Grace Pennington, who is in charge of administering tests and exams to students, reviews and compiles the results of the mental ability test.

Mr. John R. Sinks, Elmhurst's most recently appointed guidance counselor, emphasizes to Brock Able the importance of choosing a suitable career.

Mr. Lester Grile, superintendent of Fort Wayne Community Schools, administrates city school system.

Miss Ruth Wimmer, who is Dean of Girls and a Chemistry teacher, aids students in planning their class schedules and discussing their various problems, and supervising the sick-room.

Administration coordinates various school functions

Efficiently, completely, and happily—these adverbs adequately describe the way in which the administration operated the events this year at Elmhurst.

For the 10th year, Principal Charles Eickhoff followed a very busy schedule as principal at Elmhurst. He was aided this year by Mr. Robert Zimmerman who acted as assistant principal.

Filling the important roles of guidance counselors were Mrs. Grace Pennington, Mr. John Sinks, and Mr. Douglas Spencer. Their duties were to aid the students in choosing a college or a vocation.

Miss Ruth Wimmer, in addition to teaching her classes, and Mr. William Geyer assumed the positions of Dean of Girls and Boys, respectively.

Assuming his new responsibility as Dean of Boys, Mr. Geyer's numerous duties range from counseling students to promoting school driving safety at Elmhurst by selling a parking permit to Nancy Wills.

Mrs. Shaw, secretary for Mr. Eickhoff, accepts the absence report from Sharon Clark while Mrs. Hardy files the student enrollment cards.

As secretary for the guidance counselors, several of Mrs. Sark's duties include typing permanent record cards, class schedules, and news bulletins.

Class duties, extra activities compose numerable obligations of Elmhurst's teaching staff

Miss Wimmer's busy days are spent in many diverse duties such as arranging the planter in the hall across from the cafeteria.

Trojans express themselves, gain further knowledge in

ACADEMICS

"All right, class, close your books and take out a sheet of paper and a pencil." These familiar words caused different students to experience many varied moments. Keeping up with academic work called for preparation. The amount of work done by the student determined between feelings of tenseness or confidence when these words were heard.

Every class presented new ideas in knowledge which combined for the academic success of the year.

Newly installed developmental reading labs provide students with booths and special equipment including earphones. Kay Schweitzer, Jo Churchward, and Ray Johnson are among the many Trojans who increase their reading speeds and improve their reading comprehensions.

English courses vary from the traditional with Record players prove themselves as practical teaching instruments by relating and repeating definitions of vocabulary words. Students try to write and memorize the words as they are given.

the usage of laboratories in addition to visual, audio aids

Ladders and books are the only props needed to depict scenes from "Our Town". Karen Abbott and John Antalis add reality to the play as they portray characters for Mrs. Kolin's sophomore class.

"We who speak English today are heirs, but we are also ancestors."

This year the English Department emphasized the development of the ability to communicate through speaking and writing. One of the best ways to learn to speak and write is to read. The newly-expanded library offered many more good books.

The sophomores involved themselves in simple writing and studying of American Literature. The juniors followed this by more complicated writing and studying in English Literature. A new installment was a double-x lane junior English class which stressed the idea of logic. The seniors dealt with different forms of writing and a study of world literature. The senior course was intended to prepare the students for further courses in writing and literature in college, or give non-college bound students a basis for pursuing their own reading.

All classes stressed increasing vocabulary, because words are the tools with which one thinks.

"Heavy shoulder pads are also very important", Cheryl Platt, senior, explains while presenting a demonstration speech to her classmates.

"Look at this!" motions Jake Davis to Ginny Chambers as they pantomime a scene. Pantomimes, whether humorous or tragic, demand precise actions and intense concentration by both performers.

Speech class offers a diversified program

Radio and television reporting are vital means of communication to the public today. Rick Alexander practices audio broadcasting methods before reporting a story to Mr. Kurtz's speech class.

"Swim Sam, swim. A well-swum swim is a swim well swum. Six sharp, shivering sharks are going to snap your limbs."

In mastering a tongue-twister, one is unconsciously applying the five points that make up good speech breathing, phonation, resonance, articulation, and gesticulation, in that order.

The students who participate in speech class learned these fundamentals through giving and listening to various types of speeches. These included demonstration speeches, speeches to convince, arouse, or inform, extemporaneous speeches, and pantomimes.

Powers of reasoning and logical thinking were learned through participating in debate.

These courses were not intended to turn out polished speakers, but to give students confidence in expressing themselves.

Homework, book reports are aided by Elmhurst library

Leafing through a novel, Tonianne Boroff finds an interesting page and pauses to read it. However, Murray Miller can't seem to make up his mind and continues to scan the stacked shelves of books.

This year Elmhurst's new library opened for its first full year of service. The thousands of new books that had been added offered much more reading and reference material to students. The quiet atmosphere of the large room, the warm gold walls, and the darkly finished book shelves and tables provided a place for students to go and study.

Within the span of a day, an average of 700 students visited the library. The facilities could seat a maximum of 102 at one time. At the beginning of the school year the ever-growing library contained 10,000 books, about twice as many as the former library had.

Student use was indicated by the average circulation in a day, which was about 180 books. These books, along with the newspapers and magazines provided, were used for research on term papers, course assignments, or book reports.

Novels, short stories, non-fiction books, and essays confront Bobby Ellis, senior, while she considers which books to check out first.

The quiet atmosphere of the library provides an excellent environment for study. Each period, students take advantage of the many library resources while preparing for their assignments for classes.

interest for students of Elmhurst's science courses

Chemistry students, Ruth Fralick, Neal Rairden and Sandee Hornberger perform in class one of the many experiments done during the year in our excellent laboratory facilities here at EHS.

Traditional courses offered by the Science Department this year were chemistry, physics, and biology. This was the third year that there was a class in Chem Study—an experimental science, where the students spent more time in the laboratory. This is the second year that the physics classes used two textbooks, the traditional and the Physical Science Study Committee.

Two new courses were added to the science curriculum this year, botany and earth science. Botany was offered as a second year course in biological science. Consideration was given to fundamental life processes of plants. A survey was made of the plant kingdom which was designed to give the students knowledge and appreciation of the living world.

The aim of the course in earth science was to provide a basic understanding of the earth and its position in the universe. It was offered to all three classes and it involved mainly a study of astronomy and geology. It also dealt with some basic chemistry, weather, and climates.

Lynn French, Mr. Griggs and Theresa Maldoney are identifying the parts of a plant. This is one of the projects of Biology class.

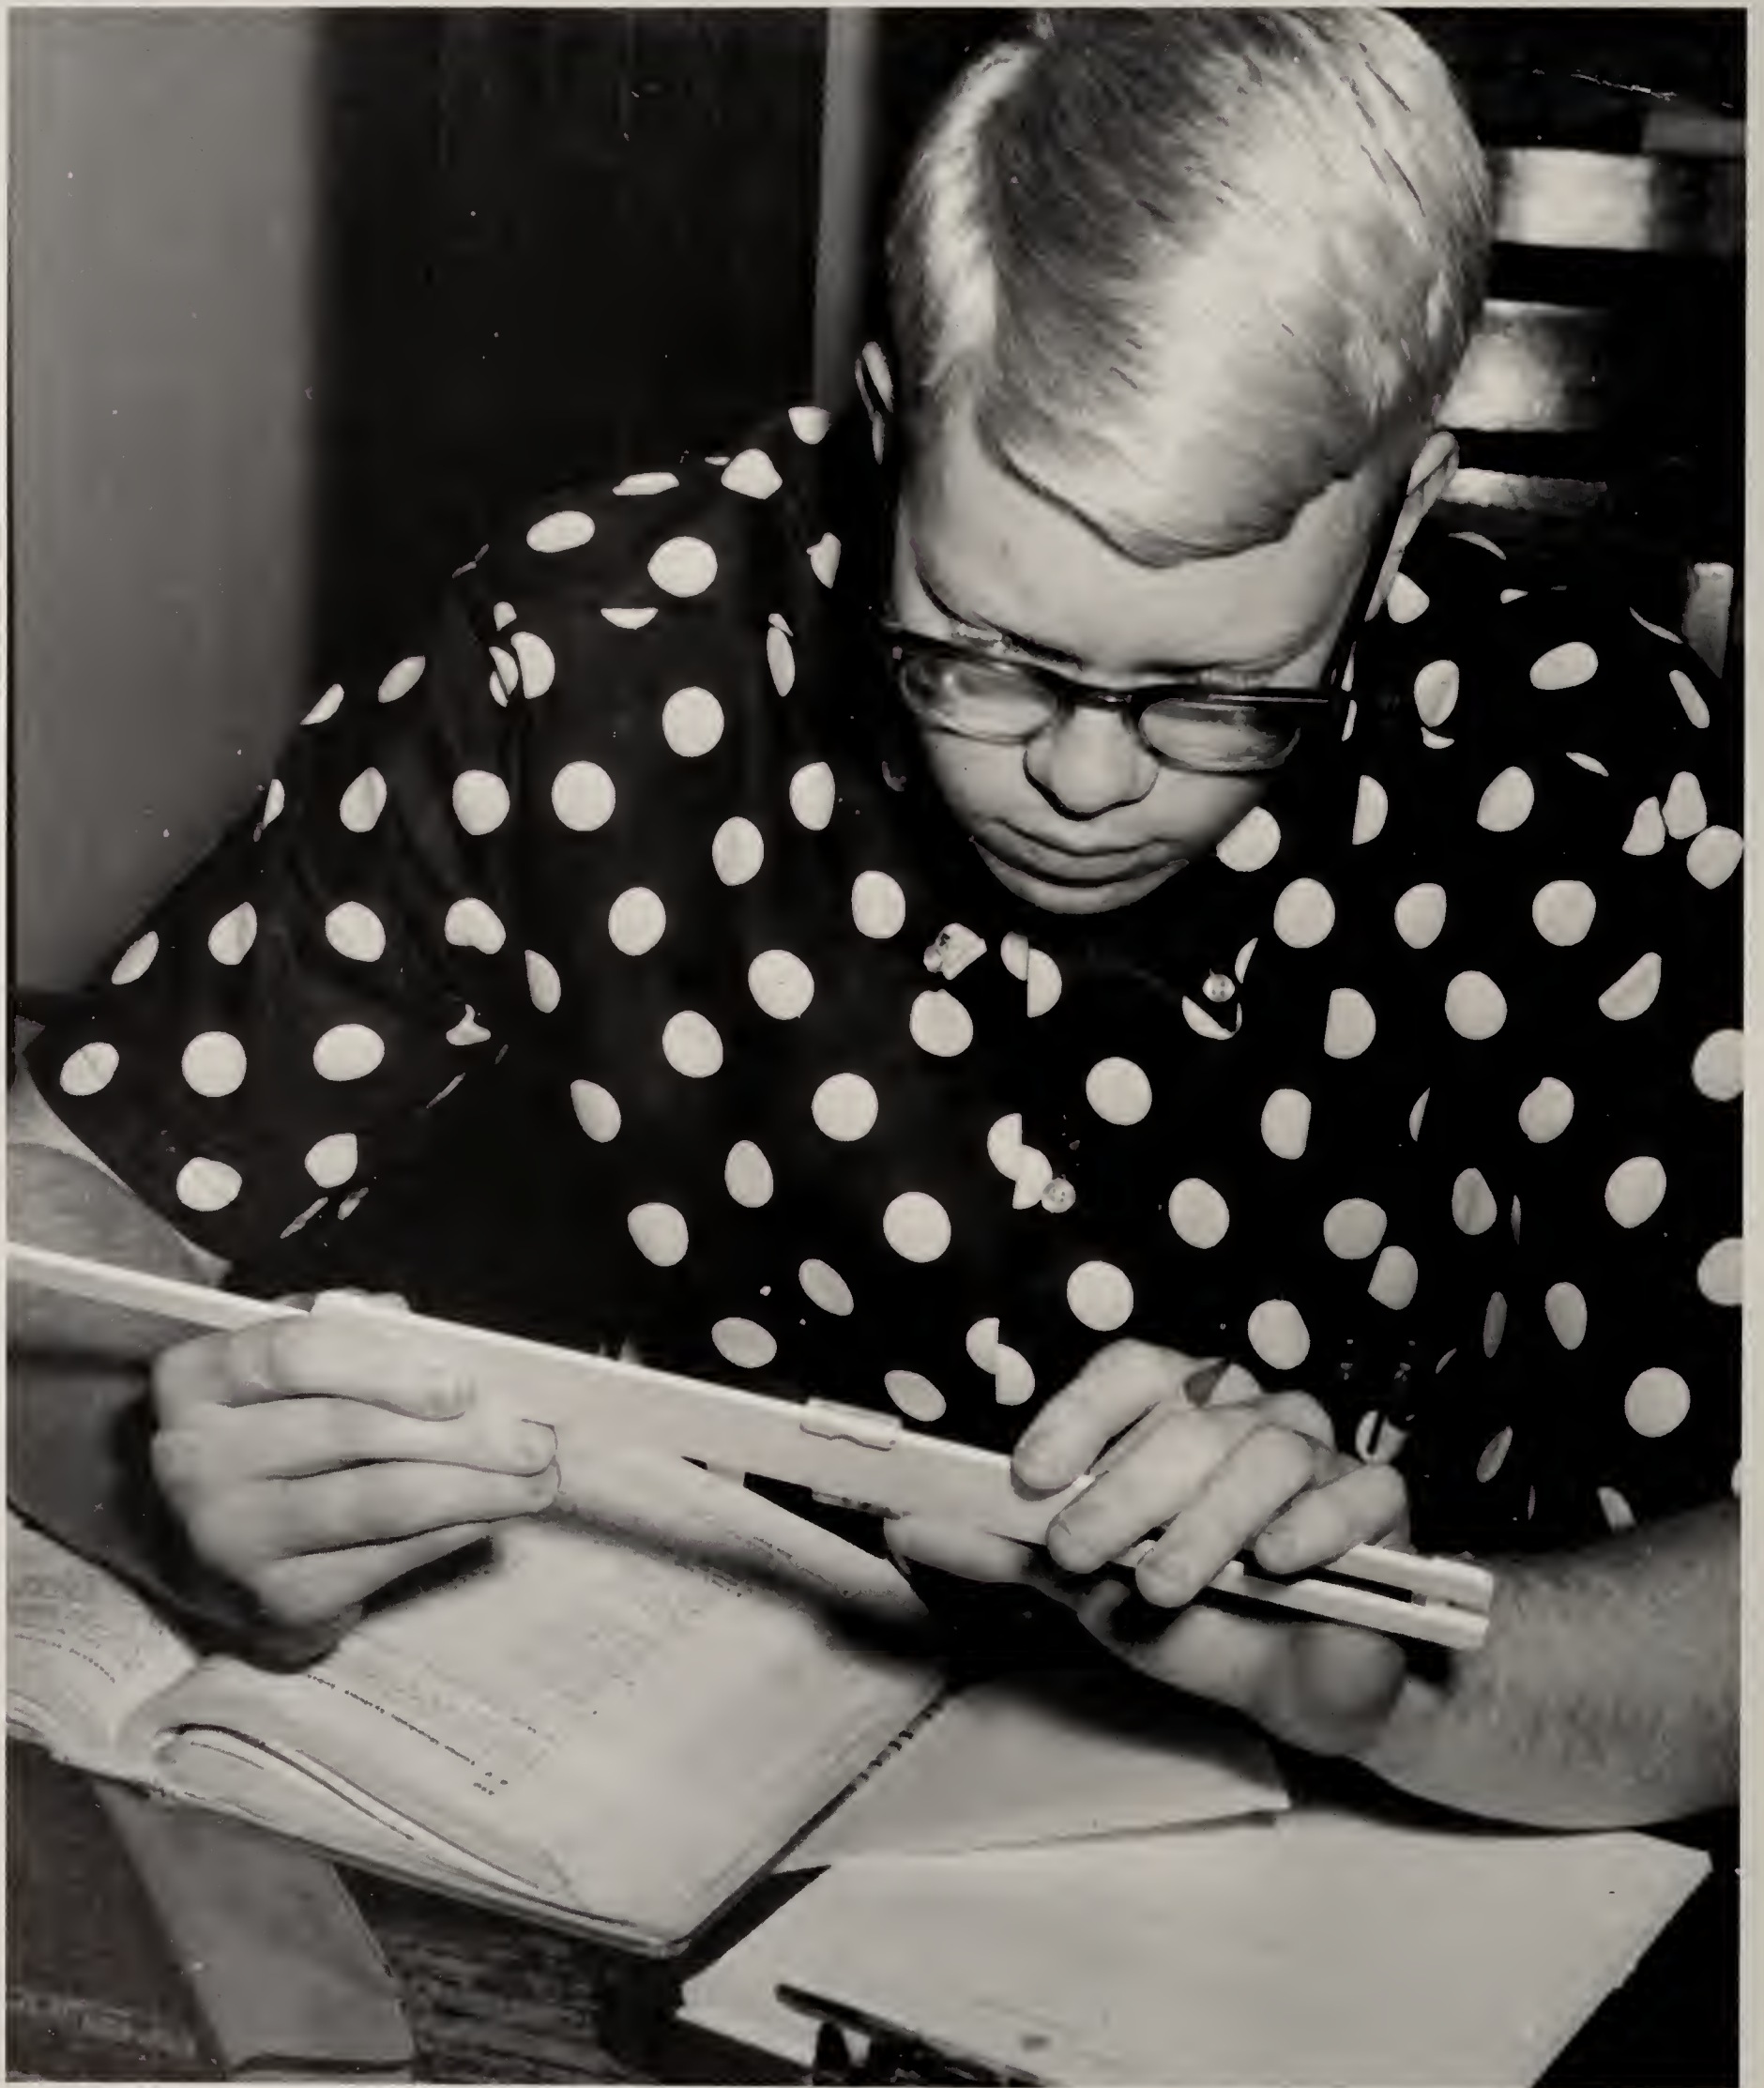

Using weights and measures is a helpful aid in solving problems arising in Physics class. Mr. Master-son explains it as Steve Yentes, Steve Presbindowski, and Sheila Huffman look on.

ideas, to obtain practical facts

Relationships of different geometrical figures are demonstrated to math pupils by Mr. Poor.

Today's complex world demands that every person have a knowledge of mathematics, a challenging and ever-broadening subject. This year for the first time an accelerated course called principles of mathematics was offered. Seniors who had taken the mathematics courses that were offered and were interested in continuing their studies in math, could take the new course. The main purpose of this course was to tie together all of the different branches of mathematics and thus show that there is a basic simple structure in all math, and the other branches are just variations.

The traditional courses in the math curriculum included general math, Algebra I, geometry, Algebra II, and senior math. The senior math course was made up of trigonometry, analytic geometry, solid geometry, and an introduction to calculus.

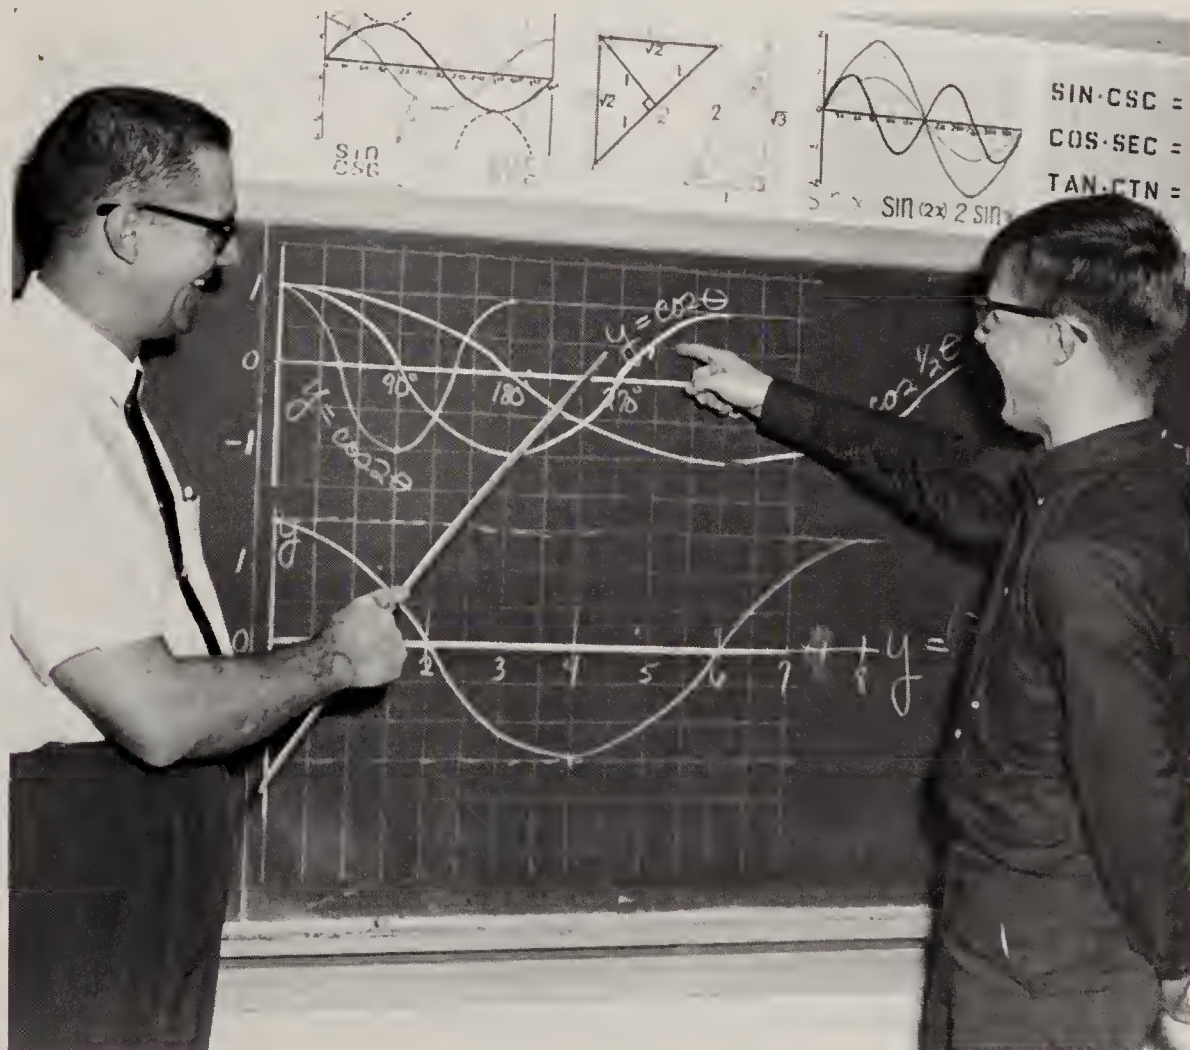

Completing a math assignment, Chris Johnson uses a compass, one of geometry's basic tools.

functions required for living in contemporary America

Interest in government class stimulated organization of the Political Science Club. Executive board members John Haynes, Mark Merchant and Bill Irish discuss by-laws with Mr. Fowerbaugh, adviser.

Social studies—learning about the peoples of the world, past and present, in order to be able to shape the future. These courses sought to give a better understanding of the world we live in, and to mold responsible citizens.

World history and United States history taught underclass students that people can learn from the past to avoid suffering in the future.

Senior courses were government, sociology, and economics. Government showed students the dependence of their government on their knowledge of it and their participation in it. Sociology dealt with the social problems of the world and an individual's own role in society. Economics is the study of the ways in which the people of an entire nation make a living.

Electives included world affairs, which gave students a chance to vent their feelings about current topics in class discussions, and geography, which described the features and measurements of the earth's surface.

Symbols of the state flag are explained by Mr. Weber.

Sociology students Linda Perdue and Keyth Price discuss teenage social adjustment problems.

New language laboratories better vocabularies, fluency

Language labs are one of the many diversified methods of class instruction. Rick Clendenen and Diane Feigner use the new facilities to learn Spanish.

of foreign language interpreters

Translating English to Latin requires skill and knowledge which Tim Raymer and Jo Churchward achieve thorough board experience.

The study of foreign languages has become a popular idea today. Learning the language of different countries, along with the culture and customs of the people, helps to bring the nations of the world closer together.

New was the word in Elmhurst's foreign language department this year. The language lab was completed and put into use. In the lab students heard tapes, answered questions, and taped their own voices. The lab offered the students individual practice and correction, it reinforced the new materials used in the classrooms, and it served as a library for extra practice.

New oral techniques were used in the modern language classes. These included the Encyclopedia Britannica films, which developed skills in listening and speaking, followed by reading and writing.

Breaking away from regular classroom routine, Mr. Holt uses periodicals to provide additional information on present French events.

Expanding their knowledge in the language, seniors Ron Blaettner, Marlene Bunsold, Hoagi Bliwernitz, Dale Bender, juniors Linda Neuman, Carol Harz, and sophomore Steve Dwyer spend a class period leafing through a few current German magazines to better their understanding of European living.

Wanda Ditmer and Jean Schoeneman work with practice sets in bookkeeping class to acquaint themselves with the methods used in tabulating records, accounting sums, and recording figures.

The business curriculum at Elmhurst attracted those who were interested in the business world. The varied courses prepared students for further study in law, secretarial work, accounting, and business.

Typing courses proved essential to many, as typing is an invaluable aid in making neat papers. Typing, shorthand, and office practice prepared future secretaries. Office practice taught the use of office machinery. Personal typing was a one semester course available to seniors with busy schedules.

Bookkeeping showed students how to keep accurate records and accounts. Business math dealt with problems such as buying and selling, finance, and industry.

The functions, the economic services, the organization, and the operation of American business are emphasized in business management. Also stressed were the philosophy and basic concepts of business. Law is essential to good citizenship. In business law efforts were made to give meaning to the commonplace legal activities of the average person.

Portraying the characters of a mock trial in business law are Linda Perdue, Pete Mayclin, Maravene Bruerd and Gary Rickner.

Expressions through techniques yield art creations

Bruce Powell and Jake Davis sketch the reflections and silhouettes of the glassware in art class.

Art is one of the strongest humanities because in art human qualities are primary. In this era the machine has given everyone time. Man should use this extra time to express human qualities in a creative way. Through expressing themselves in their artwork, students began to realize that they could help to create the surroundings they wanted to live in.

Using their own abilities and ideas students worked on jewelry projects, setting stones in silver and gold. They molded objects out of clay, then glazed and baked them. Around the holiday season they put their own impressions in design to create original Christmas cards.

One of the projects of the stagecraft classes was to write their own one-minute movies and pantomime them.

The art department contributed to the school by decorating for dances, the prom, and music concerts. They also gave a holiday atmosphere to the cafeteria at Christmas.

Diane Puff applies her skill with a hammer by helping stagecraft students construct decorative acoustical designs for the gymnasium.

Employing the newly acquired centrifical casting machine in their Art II class, Jim Solari, Valeria Tutrinoli, and Judi Cross apply plaster and molten metal to produce self-designed jewelry.

Marching Trojans brave the cold weather and perform for fans during half-time at football games.

Girls listen attentively to the male voices behind them during a choir practice session.

Music expresses self-satisfaction, gaiety, success

Carefully following each note, members of the Girls' Chorus gaily sing along with Mr. Wieser.

The Music Department expanded this year to include, along with the usual music appreciation, new courses of music theory and music history.

Students in the music appreciation class gained a better understanding of the cultures of the world. They studied great composers, the periods from which they came, and the works that they wrote. The students studied the various styles and forms of music, and learned to identify the different instruments by their appearance and sound.

The new music theory course was primarily for those students planning to major in music at college. It dealt with the fundamentals of harmony and enabled the student to enjoy musically, satisfying creative work from the beginning.

Those students who were enrolled in the music theory class studied music history during the second semester. This course is similar to the music appreciation course, but was geared to those students with a background in music.

Homemakers obtain knowledge valuable throughout life

Animal cookies are decorated with colorful icings by Marcia Oglesby and Linda Volz. Planning refreshments for a juvenile party is an enjoyable home economics assignment for them.

The main objective of the home economics department was to prepare girls for managing their future homes and families wisely.

Besides studying from texts, students gained much knowledge through actual experience in the various fields.

Once they had mastered the principles of nutrition, management of time and materials, and become well-informed consumers, the girls were given the opportunity to plan, prepare, and serve their own meals.

The aim of the sewing courses was to teach girls to plan and make their own wardrobe. They advanced from homespun skirts to suits and dresses.

The family living course dealt with social relationships within a family, while the home management taught them how to run a household efficiently.

Accompanied by her stuffed bear, Jackie Kliner proudly models the striped pajamas she made for the home economics fashion show.

Dream kitchens and long-desired living rooms are designed by Cathy Brown and Janis Fulkerson. Girls in the home management classes plan each room for their "homes of the future" scrapbooks.

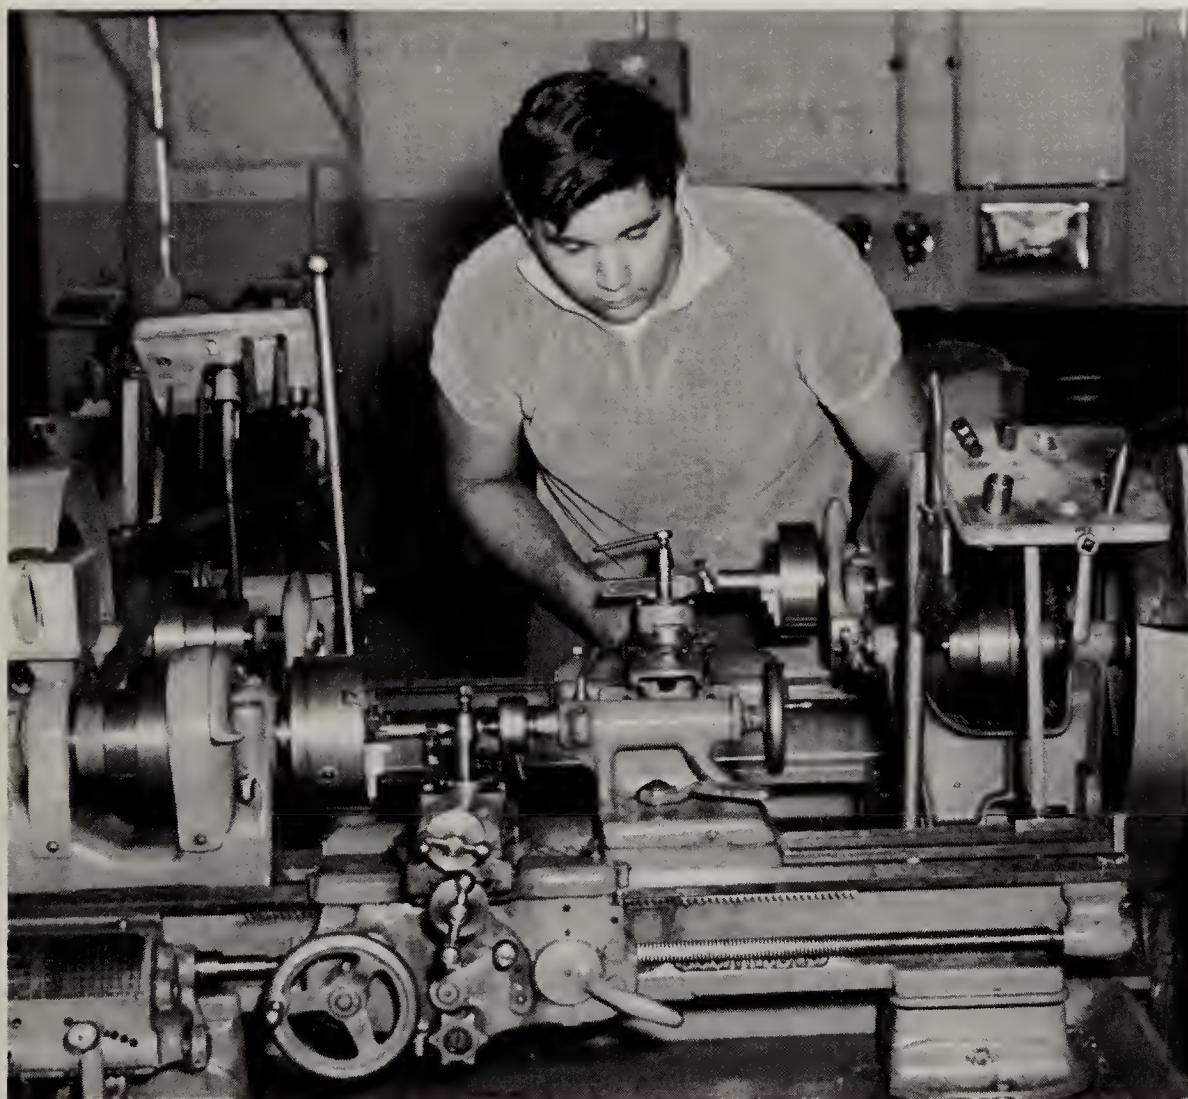

Restoring equipment is necessary to keep machines in running order. Steve Cutter, Rick Dahman, Al Zartman, Mark Montalvo, and Tom Morr watch as Mr. Renkenberger repairs the surfacing machine.

Employing the basic tools of a professional draftsman, Steve Rehm completes his drawing.

Boys acquire valuable skills through industrial arts

With the care, precision, and accuracy necessary to produce a finished product, George Colby faces a threading tap in his Metal 3 class, preparing the final touches on one of his required projects.

Industrial arts curriculum can be an important part of an individual's general education. Not necessarily being vocational, these courses are valuable for anyone who has to live in an industrial society. They may provide recreational opportunities for later in life. They also create better consumers because knowledge of how things are put together gives the ability to judge the quality of products.

In general drafting classes' students acquired skill through practice exercises. As they gained experience, they advanced to more difficult projects, including drawing up complete house plans.

In metal classes work was done with useful metals, bending, molding, and fastening them into desired shapes. Pupils were also taught the use of such equipment as the metal lathe, milling machine, and drill press.

Woodshop students worked with projects using hand and power tools. But in both wood and metal the projects were not an end in themselves, but a means for actual experience.

Gym students strive for stamina, build sound health, alert minds

The art of archery requires dexterity which gym students Dianne Dettmer, Sharon Gregory, Holly Wisel, and Cheryl Braun are attempting to achieve through continued practice during their class period.

Shuffleboard can be played indoors as well as out. Claudia Hemlinger demonstrates the versatile sport for pupils in Mrs. Doswell's class.

A good education involves improving the whole individual. The purpose of the physical education department is primarily to develop a person physically as well as mentally. Everybody is given the opportunity to participate to the best of his ability. Students gained co-ordination as they learned sportsmanship and teamwork.

Boys classes started out with calisthenics and then proceeded to various sports, team and individual. Team sports included flag football, basketball, volleyball, and softball. Boys competed individually in wrestling, weight lifting, tumbling, and track events.

Girls classes learned such individual skill sports as archery, bowling, tennis, and badminton. Interest in these sports could be carried over as hobbies or recreations in later life. Team sports were volleyball, basketball, and softball.

Grading in all classes was based not only on ability, but on knowledge of the sports, attitude, and attendance.

Push-ups are excellent examples of the many exercises employed to keep boys in good condition. Gym class provides good opportunities for the students to improve themselves physically and mentally.

The journalism curriculum at Elmhurst gives students authentic newspaper and printing experience. It not only teaches students how to read and use a newspaper but also teaches them the fundamentals of producing one.

This course can be a challenge to English students. It gives them the opportunity to apply their knowledge of English to practical working procedures.

The journalism classes indirectly help to develop good personality traits in the students. They have to learn to accept responsibility, to be tactful, and to be able to cooperate. As a result, leadership qualities are developed.

This year students were assigned a school news beat for which they had to write, edit, and headline their own stories. They took their own pictures and learned to develop and print them. Students studied newspaper layouts and put out their own mock newspaper. Journalism II classes advanced to doing a prescribed amount of work for the Advance and conducted research surveys.

Realms of untried ventures unfold from varied

ACTIVITIES

Activities performed in organizations displayed moments of creative thinking in action. Academic work constructed the skeleton, but school life was not complete without sharing in outside functions.

Because of the great variety of clubs functioning at Elmhurst, most of the students recognized the opportunities close at hand and participated in one or more which interested them. From taking part, Trojans gained responsibility and satisfaction from helping others.

Student Council presents democratic ideas to classes

Student Council officers Fred Strauss, Chris Havens, Will Hausman, Sue Dettmer, and Rich Cooper pause outside to discuss promotion ideas for the candy sale before attending a business meeting.

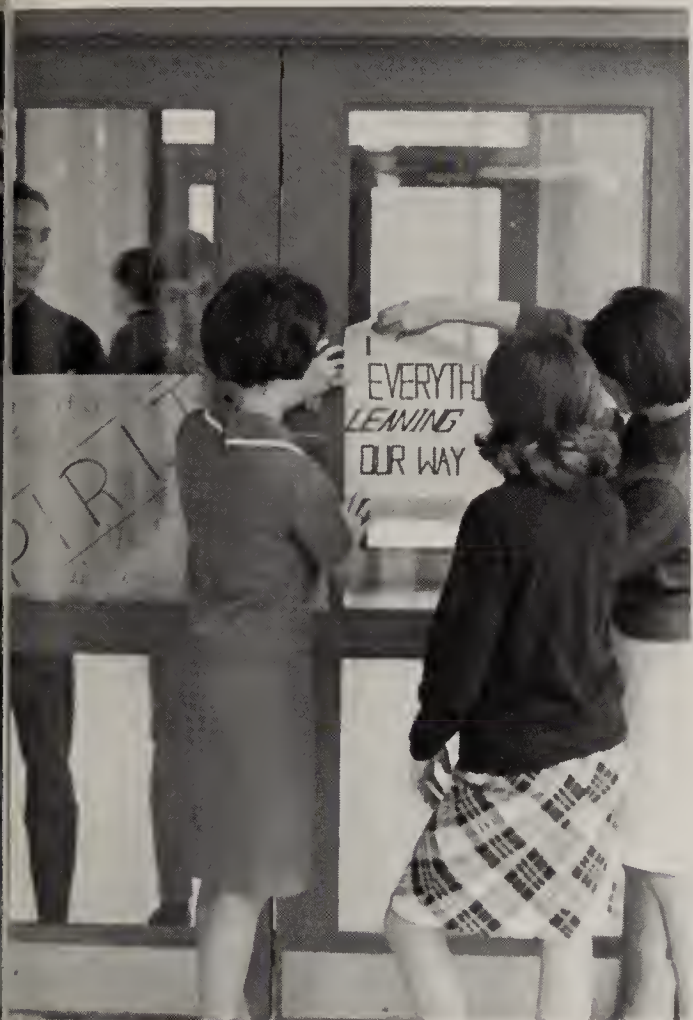

Elmhurst's Student Council entered its fourth year of service to the school this year under the leadership of president Will Hausman. The Council's main objectives were to increase the communication of ideas between the students and the faculty, to allow the student body an opportunity to express its views, coordinate and guide student activities, and to develop good citizens through experience in cooperativeness. These ideas are all expressed in the constitution of the Council.

The main money-making project was the school-wide candy sale. Half of the profits went toward the Junior Prom. A collection was taken at Thanksgiving time which went to help people in our community. The Council purchased many pictures to add to the attractiveness of the halls. Members also helped in changing the honor roll system this year.

The Red Cross Council is an organization which is dedicated to service to its school and community. The members, four boys and four girls from each class, are elected when they are sophomores to serve for three years. A new idea this year was to have the whole student body contribute to the work of the club.

Among the service projects that the Council performed for the school was paying for and planting shrubs in front of the school and in the courtyard. A special committee sent sympathy and get-well cards to students and faculty when the occasion called for it. The Council was also responsible for Elmhurst's well-run hall monitor system.

The student body participated in the National High School Red Cross Enrollment Drive. From money collected, the Council paid local and national dues to be used for children's relief in the United States. Out of the club treasury came toys which were given to the Christmas Bureau, and layettes which members assembled to send to Vietnam.

Ilian reveals literary accomplishments of students

Duties of section heads Dan Gawthrop, Stan Dietzel, Judi Cross, Elaine Bryson, John Zavitz, Bruce Jennings, editor, and Sue Gillie are to evaluate various manuscripts submitted for publication.

Elmhurst's literary magazine, the Ilian, gave students the opportunity to reveal the feelings of their generation, their inner emotions, philosophy, hopes, and dreams. Through the Ilian, not only could students express themselves and see their work in print, but everyone had the chance to realize and enjoy the talent in creative writing at Elmhurst.

The poems, short stories, and essays that were included were judged the best submitted on the basis of quality, not giving preference to class rank. It was hoped that the writers who had works published would be encouraged to continue to write. One purpose of the magazine was to uncover new talent that would not have been acknowledged otherwise.

The Ilian was originated three years ago by Mrs. Juanita Decker and her senior English class. This first mimeographed issue was followed by two printed issues put together by organized staffs.

Art students illustrated the well-received Ilian. This magazine ranks Elmhurst with other good high schools in the field of literature.

Toni Heiney displays one of the Ilian sweat-shirts for Sandy Coverdale to examine.

About a week before school started the staff of the 1967 Anlibrum, eager with hopes and ideas, swung into action. They realized that they had a task before them that would require a lot of work and planning throughout the coming year, but would give them much satisfaction—to produce the best possible yearbook they could.

Several new techniques were used in this year's book. Among them were the mosaic layouts in the opening section. The cover design was an innovation created by Sandy Sunderland, editor, and Sue Dettmer, associate editor.

"Annie" staff members worked the last period every day. Around deadline time it was not unusual to hear the hum of busy activity in Room 108 after school hours. They strived to make this year's Anlibrum even better than last year's, which placed in the top five statewide in the National High School Yearbook Contest.

Sports staff members John Haynes, Mike Wismer, editor Doug Finlayson, and Will Block explain to photographer Rex Gray the kind of action shots they want to be taken during a cross country meet.

The Elmhurst Advance staff, following the precedent set last year, sent the school newspaper to press every week. For the first time an eight-page issue was published. All of the staff members met together every day during the sixth period. As a result of this new idea the work proved to be more diversified. Sales this year were higher than ever before with subscriptions reaching near one thousand.

During "National Newspaper Week" the staff attended a luncheon at the Fort Wayne Newspaper building. They also attended Ball State Journalism Day, April 29.

Editor Thayne Sterling served as student adviser from the eastern Indiana area to the Indiana High School Press Association advisory board.

Last year's Advance earned National recognition from Quill and Scroll and the National Scholastic Press Association in the form of first place honor ratings. This year's staff strived toward another successful year and an All-American award from the critics.

provides training for Forensic League participants

Hours of practice are needed to perfect both the affirmative and negative sides of a debate team. Varsity debaters Bruce Jennings, Larry Wilson, and Bruce Crozier discuss and evaluate a speech that is being given by Stan Dietzel. In so doing, they hope to present the best possible speeches.

Forum participants gained, through hard work and competition, qualities of good leadership and effective speaking far beyond what they would in a speech classroom. Throughout the year these students prepared speeches and debates, and traveled with the club to various schools in the state to deliver them in competition. Among the places they visited were Peru, New Castle, Muncie Central, Wabash, Howe Military, Columbia City, New Haven, and Lafayette Jefferson.

The types of oral work in which students competed included debating, radio announcing, extemporaneous speaking, original oratory, dramatic, humorous, or oratorical interpretation, and poetry reading. They were judged and rated with others in their category and gained points toward membership in the National Forensic League, an honorary speech fraternity.

To broaden views of scholastic and industrial science through lectures, movies, and field trips—this was the purpose of the Phi-Chem Club. At the beginning of this year a committee worked to write a new constitution which helped to establish the club as a true science organization and limit it to those interested.

The Phi-Chem Club planned to have at meetings, during the course of the year, a representative from each type of engineering, such as chemical, civil, mechanical, and electrical, explain his work. At one meeting Dr. Dan Dwyer lectured on and demonstrated the principles of the laser beam.

The club members traveled on field trips to such places as Joslyn Steel Mills and B. F. Goodrich.

Future Teachers of America Club aimed its activities toward acquainting students with the opportunities, challenges, and problems of the teaching profession. Meetings were planned featuring speakers from the field of education who told students what the field was like and what was new. In the spring senior girls spent time student teaching at local elementary and junior high schools.

The organization also performed many services throughout the year for community and school benefit. Members helped to relieve the load on Elmhurst teachers by assisting as service workers in marking papers, averaging grades, and other varied tasks. Other service projects included sponsoring a dance for the Johnny Appleseed School, collecting Christmas presents for the State School, and acting as guides at Back-to-School Night and Teachers Convention.

At the end of the year an FTA-PTA scholarship was given to two seniors who planned to enter the teaching profession.

Other specialized speakers attending the meetings were an insurance salesman, a personnel director, and a business college representative.

Near the end of the year, an award banquet was held. At this time deserving members received awards in the form of a letter or a pin.

Y-Teens is a character-building organization affiliated with the YWCA for girls dedicated to the principles of Christian living and fellowship. In order to help each girl grow as a person, in friendship, and in the love of God, the club's program falls within four major areas—personal relations, service, religion, and social relations.

This year Y-Teens worked to make the club mean more than it has in the past. An innovation was Hi-Y—Y-Teen co-operation, including joint meetings and joint projects.

Y-Teens sold toothbrushes this year to bring an exchange student to Elmhurst next year.

"To create, maintain, and extend throughout the home, school, and community high standards of Christian character."

This is the purpose of all Hi-Y clubs as stated by the YMCA, the sponsoring organization. The Hi-Y platform stresses clean speech, sportsmanship, scholarship, and living. The Hi-Y Club at Elmhurst, open to all boys, provided its membership the opportunity for activities aiming toward personal growth and development.

Some of the meetings centered around special speakers. Mr. Bob Davenport, football coach at Taylor University, and Mr. Colin Lister, business manager for the Fort Wayne Komets were guests of the Hi-Y. At another meeting a film of the Indianapolis 500 race was shown.

This year the Hi-Y sponsored joint projects with the Y-Teens. Among these was the "Miss Virginia" project at Christmas time. Along with the Y-Teens, the Hi-Y helped in collecting numerous gifts. The clubs also worked together on a school dance and other community projects.

We believe that an acquaintance with the civilization of Greece and Rome will help us to understand and appraise the world of today which is indebted to ancient civilization in its governments, laws, literature, languages, and arts."

This was part of the Creed of the Classical Club, an organization open to all Latin students. To elect officers, the club was divided into two parties, Patrician and Plebian. Each party held a convention which came up with a slate of candidates. From this the final officers were chosen by the whole group.

The club held a school dance, a Saturnalia party, and a Toga Hop. The crowning of the year's activities was the Latin Banquet, at which members dressed in costume, dined and were entertained in the old Roman style.

Serving as classes as well as an organization, the choirs were kept very busy. All of the choirs combined their efforts in performing three major concerts. These were presented at Christmas, mid-season, and spring.

Each of the separate choirs gave approximately six individual performances. The Concert Choir had civic and church engagements. The Choraliers, a select group which practices after school, the Boy's Chorus, and the Girl's Chorus all gave their own programs.

A new innovation this year was the Swing Choir. This group limited themselves to singing popular music such as Dixieland, jazz, and bop.

At the banquet in the spring, honoring seniors, service awards were given to students for points accumulated by extra work, participation in activities, or by winning honors in the annual NISBOVA contest.

The Choir helped to benefit the student by developing talents and adding to his knowledge and enjoyment of music.

A Marching Band, Concert Band, Training Band, Orchestra, and Stage Band comprise the main instrumental organizations at Elmhurst.

A two-week summer band camp prepared the Marching Band for all home football games where it presented intricate marching shows to the themes of "No Business Like Show Business" and "Drummer's Holiday". This band also performed in parades on Memorial Day and at the opening of the new airline at Baer Field.

The Concert Band and the Orchestra presented a Mid-Winter Concert and a Spring Concert. "Doc" Severinsen, a noted TV and stage personality, performed with the bands at the Mid-Winter Concert.

The Stage Band performed on both radio and TV during the year. It also produced a record album which was featured on several radio shows.

Many individuals and groups won first division ratings in district and state contests, and the Concert and Stage Bands won first division at State. Thirty musicians represented Elmhurst in the All-City Band and Orchestra.

The twirlers were a group of talented girls who worked with the band to produce programs for half-time audiences at all of the home football and basketball games. They also presented the flag for the singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner" at the beginning of the game.

Practicing every seventh period, the nine girls worked to perfect the dance and marching routines which they performed, to the music of the band, during the half-times of the games. This year the twirlers received new black uniforms decked with silver sequins.

Two members of the squad attended summer twirling camps where they got new ideas for routines. Jean Hilbish went to Smith-Walbridge Twirling Camp, while Janet Snyder attended the Midwest Band Camp at Purdue University.

By obtaining the correct number of points through hours of practice and marching in parades, the twirler was awarded a letter or a pin.

Twirlers Beth Waterhouse, Ellen Schinbeckler, Jenny Koomler, and Janet Snyder perform a colorful routine during the half-time program.

Presenting the flag prior to every home game and providing half-time entertainment for all home football and basketball games are important duties fulfilled by the majorettes.

Leading the Trojans on to victory are the varsity cheerleaders Carol Hansen, Myra Ping, Claudia Bolyard, Mary Beth Marr, and Barb Bourie.

Energetic yell squad instills lively school spirit

Becoming involved in a close games, varsity cheerleaders, Carol Hansen, Myra Ping, and Mary Beth Marr relieve tension by giving an enthusiastic yell at the end of a victorious quarter.

"We're those Trojans, couldn't be prouder!" This chant, along with many others led by the EHS cheerleaders, typifies the feelings that the yell leaders worked to emphasize at basketball and football games.

The varsity and reserve squads worked together in planning the pep sessions and making and displaying signs to boost school spirit.

The varsity girls attended a cheerleading convention held at North Side. They also received new red uniforms this year.

"The cheerleader should be able to unite the student body in a single cause, and generate wholesome attitudes and loyalty as well as the will to win." This statement, quoted from one of the Elmhurst coaches, expresses the functions which the Trojans cheerleaders strived to accomplish.

Spirited Pep Club spells out victory yells for Trojans

The Booster Club is in charge of selling refreshments at home games. Officers: Dianne Dulin, vice-president; Ruth Fralick, secretary, and Clare Shoaff, president take their turn to chip in and assume these responsibilities. Ruth is trying to help Steve Heaston, junior, decide what to buy.

The organization that was responsible for encouraging good sportsmanship, promoting school spirit, and boosting team morale at football and basketball games was the Elmhurst Booster Club. During the sports seasons this hard-working group of girls met every Friday morning before school, and several times on Thursdays after school.

Booster members practiced and learned cheers with the varsity and reserve cheerleaders. An innovation this year was the use of cards. The girls worked diligently with the cardboard sheets, which were red on one side and white on the other, toward establishing an efficient card section.

Boosters raised money by having bake sales and managing the popcorn booth at home basketball games. They helped pay for new varsity cheerleader uniforms and school or sports projects.

Girls earned points toward a letter by serving as row captains, attending games, and selling popcorn.

By the use of newly purchased red and white flash cards the Booster Club forms various words which spell out victory cheers for the Trojans. The money that was used to purchase the colorful flash cards was raised by numerous Booster Club bake sales conducted during the lunch hours.

GAA girls keep fit, find good times through vigorous sports activities

Participating in one of the many GAA planned activities, officers Pam Koehlinger, president Kathy Zahn, Claudia Leeper, and Janet Freiburger enjoy themselves in a leisure game of bowling.

Elmhurst's Girls Athletic Association has belonged to the Indiana League of High School GAAs for four years. The purpose, as stated by the League, is "to stimulate the co-curricular phase of the high school girl's physical education program."

The GAA provided for members a recreational program away from school. For the outside activities a different sport was participated in every six weeks. These sports included horseback riding, swimming, bowling, roller skating, and ice skating.

Members could earn awards through a point system. Local awards included a letter or a pin, the latter requiring more points. A state award, in the form of a wall plaque, is also offered. Points were obtained through participation in sports and by passing skill and knowledge tests.

Largest Lettermen's group helps buy football stands

E-man Steve Quance passes out candy to Russ Bush and John Capin for initiation.

Launching high pressure sales campaign, George Christie and Bill Peters persuade Linda Volz to buy an Elmhurst license plate.

"Mighty E-man, thou art great . . ."

These words, repeated by initiates of the Lettermen's Club, characterize the respect all Trojans felt for this club. Initiation took place in the fall. Any boy who had previously received a major or minor letter was eligible for membership.

One of the principles of the Lettermen's Club has been to set an example for others. This year, following that tradition, the E-men devised a code which outlined rules of conduct for themselves.

The Lettermen also drew up a guide for letter and numeral winners this year. This guide set standards for placing letters, numerals, and other awards on a letter jacket or sweater.

"Elmhurst Trojan" license plates were sold by E-men as a fund-raising activity. They used this money for worthy projects for the school. One of these was purchasing outdoor bleachers for track and B-team football.

Girls interested in improving their general homemaking skills made up the membership of the Home Economics Club. Always concentrating on projects pertaining to homemaking, the club had grooming and wardrobe planning as special projects this year.

Near the beginning of the year, the club had garments brought in from New York. The girls modeled these in a fashion show which they presented to other members and their mothers.

To raise funds this year, the Home Ec Club members sold pens especially designed for Elmhurst. Later in the year they held a bake sale. One of the ways they used these funds was to purchase toys which they packaged in Christmas boxes to deliver to the Childrens Ward at Parkview Hospital.

In May the Mother-Daughter Banquet was held.

Stimulating an interest in and an appreciation of mathematics, the Elmhurst Math Club entered its first full year of operation in 1966-67. The club was organized last year by sponsor Mr. Richard Poor and a group of interested math students; officers were elected and a constitution was written.

The Math Club provided students with a leaning toward mathematics the opportunity to explore areas of math outside the textbook. They investigated vocational possibilities in the field. Last of all, they enjoyed mathematics through some of the recreational type topics.

The plans to achieve these goals included field trips, student-planned presentations, and talks by outside speakers such as college instructors, business and professional people. Some of the topics discussed at this year's meetings were actuarial mathematics, topology, and computers.

Anyone who was taking a college prep math course, or had completed two years of math, was eligible for membership in this organization.

The Future Nurses of America, in its first full year of existence at Elmhurst, was formed to promote a better understanding of the career of nursing and to help members investigate the available facilities in our community, state, and nation.

For its meetings the Future Nurses planned to have as speakers a student nurse, a graduate nurse, and representatives from the nurse corps of each of the armed forces. They made field trips to each of the city hospitals, paying special attention to the children's wards and the labs.

The organization was invited to the sixth annual Medical Center Demonstration Day's Program. Miss Wimmer, the club sponsor, took several of the members to the Indiana University Medical Center in Indianapolis for the program.

As a service project, members made Christmas favors for the children at the Johnny Appleseed School. To raise funds they held a bake sale and a fish fry. By participating in these projects and attending meetings, members earned points toward a pin or charm.

The Projectionist Club is an organization based purely on service to the school. It has the heavy responsibility of handling and operating all of the school's audio-visual equipment for the classes. These include film and film strip projectors, overhead projectors, record players, and tape recorders.

In the summer the school usually sends one or more of the club members who might be interested in audio-visual careers to an audio-visual conference at Indiana University. This year's representative was Ken Cripe, club president.

In May of last year Projectionist boys and their sponsor, Mr. Ethan Gwaltney, ordered all the films and materials that each teacher wanted for the coming year. When the films arrived during the year, they notified the teacher and planned for showing the films.

The thirty-two boys who made up the membership of the club, gave up study halls and sometimes even noon hours to operate audio-visual equipment for the classes. They received a point for every film they showed, and they worked for letters, pins, or bars.

Donating his study hall period, projectionist Ken Fletter carefully threads a projector in preparing to show a film to a history class.

Ken Cripe, president of the Projection club, entangles himself in a reel of film, making it necessary for vice-president Ray Sipe to liberate him in time to show a scheduled film for a class.

Steve Quance holds the ball for Neil Rehner, as he attempts one of his twelve points after touchdown.

The 1966 Trojan football team proved one of the best in Elmhurst's gridiron history. During the season, the "Men of Troy" set eight team and individual records. Employing a new, wide-open offense, the team shattered the record for most points in one game and largest victory margin in their 52—7 victory over Central Catholic. The gridgers also set a record for the most points in one season, 167.

Russ Bush established a new record for the most points in a career as the speedy halfback rolled up a total of 115 points. Doug Finlayson proved a hawk on defense as he intercepted nine passes to set a new career record in that department. Steve Quance connected on nine touchdown passes during the season to set another new record.

Junior Rick Hoopes, who led city ends in pass receptions, set two more individual records for the most touchdowns in one game and most points scored in one game as he crossed the goal line four times. Hoopes was also the only Trojan to be named to the All-City team.

While Don Birdwell, Glenn Moses, and an unidentified Elmhurst blocker pursue the play, reserve halfback Tom Day lowers his head and braces himself for the fast closing Central defensive player.

Elmhurst's sophomore footballers experienced a disappointing season, but gained valuable instruction for the 1967 season. They finished the season with a 2—4—1 record. The reserves lost to Central Catholic, Bishop Leurs, Bishop Dwenger, and Snider by scores of 12—0, 14—6, 19—7 and 20—0, respectively. They overpowered North Side by a score of 24—7 and finished the season on a winning note by nudging Concordia 13—9. They battled Central to a 6—6 tie for their one tie of the season. Their last game with South Side was cancelled because of bad weather.

Leading the scoring for the year was Dan Leininger. He scored three touchdowns and kicked one extra point for a total of nineteen points. Leininger was followed by Mel Gater who scored seven points including an extra point and one touchdown.

Brilliant performances in Shortridge, Sectional, Regional,

In a meet with South Side and Snider, Bill Peters and Bruce Guebard have little time to admire the beauty of Foster Park as they quicken the already torrid pace in their pursuit of the leaders.

Elmhurst's cross country team vaulted to its finest season in the school's harrier history, with a fifth place finish in the state meet. Led throughout by Ron Blaettner, John Capin, and John Haynes, the team also drew consistently good results from Harry Ausderan, Jim Gerichs, Steve Kelley, and Ed Moyer. With this combination the team often captured the first seven places even while competing against as many as four other schools. This powerful balance was present throughout the entire season and was plainly evident when the Trojan team captured first place in the Shortridge Invitational meet held in Indianapolis. Led by Ron Blaettner, the harriers registered from fifth through thirty-ninth places in the statewide competition. Blaettner was also the team leader as the Elmhurst team ran to an easy first place showing in the Fort Wayne Sectional.

Trojans John Capin and John Haynes mold the necessary ingredients of stamina and desire into a winning formula to overtake their opponents.

The finish gates are a welcome sight to John Haynes as he bursts past the judges in leading the Trojans to another victory at Shoaff Park.

Rounding the last curve toward the finish, Jim Gerichs races a close contender.

With grim determination, Harry Ausderan gathers all his remaining strength and blazes down the last leg of the race to the finish line.

Junior Steve Kelley, fully aware of the pack of oncoming enemy harriers, lengthens his stride in an attempt to widen the gap.

Cross country reserve runner, John Flager, shows determination in a city meet at Shoaff Park.

Hoopmen post irregular season; Outstanding play sparks team

The Elmhurst varsity squad was aided throughout the year by the unusual height of its forwards and centers. Gary McClintick, 6'8" junior, uses his height to shoot over an eager opponent.

Hard driving senior guard, Gary Rickner, racks up two quick points against the Concordia Cadets.

Elmhurst's towering Trojans staged their first varsity basketball campaign under new Head Coach Ken Eytcheson. This year's roster listed six players over six feet. Tallest of the six were junior Gary McClintick and sophomore Steve Handy. Jim Gust, Doug Finlayson, and Dan Starnes were members of the squad who had lettered the previous year.

With a combination of fine shooting and aggressive play, the varsity squad rushed to five victories against just one defeat prior to entering the Irish Invitational Tournament.

In the first game of the tourney, the Trojan team defeated the host school by 17 points. Unfortunately, the story was different when the roundballers played South Side for the tourney championship.

After the defeat by South, the roundballers ran into difficulties. Unable to score consistently, the squad was dealt eight losses in their next 10 games. The team bounced back at the end of the season with victories over New Haven and East Noble.

Hustling junior, Rick Hoopes, takes on an awkward position over Central Tiger John Turner in an early season match at the Coliseum. Despite Rick's efforts the Tigers posted a 66-54 victory.

KNEELING: Coach Eytcheson, Coach Heaston, Coach Campbell.
STANDING: Steve Handy, Jim Gust, Dan Starnes, Doug Finlayson,

Spectacular Dan Starnes executes one of the exciting maneuvers which typified his play.

Snider makes the fatal mistake of leaving high scoring forward Jim Gust unguarded.

Steve Handy exhibits the height which helped him in his initial year of competition.

Quick guards lead team scoring

As action reaches a peak in the closing moments of a game, excitement rises on the bench. Coach Eytcheson shows his displeasure as Coach Heaston and Coach Campbell maintain their seats.

Junior, Ephriam Smiley, demonstrates the confident ball-handling which earned him a varsity position after several reserve starts. Ephriam helped the team greatly in his first year of competition at Elmhurst.

Reserve competitor, Larry DeArmond, combined height and agility in breaking open for this shot.

Wrestling team hits .500 season; inspiration, experience of seniors guide team to greater improvement

Every wrestler wants to pin his opponent as quickly as possible. Trojan Dave Hall employs a fierce half-nelson pinning combination as he overpowers his South Side competitor in the first period.

An inspiration to his wrestlers, Coach Bush reviews pre-match strategy with Bert Baker.

Wrestling took on an entirely new dimension for 1966-67. The Trojan grapplers displayed unbounded optimism and enthusiasm as they set out to improve their initial season's record of 1—10. Progressing throughout the season, the Men of Troy logged a creditable 6—6 record and became a top contender in city competition. The Red and Grey continued their vast improvement by scoring 20 points in the Sectional Tournament.

Many individual stars who developed under the steady guidance of Coach Jerry Bush were instrumental to the team's success. Bert Baker and Steve Elonzac, finishing second and fourth, respectively in Sectional action, earned identical 14—5 records. Teammates Dale Bender, who also finished fourth in the Sectional, Laune Mason, Dave Hall and Dave Carter all turned in outstanding performances.

Elated teammates gather around victorious matman Dave Hall and offer congratulations for a winning effort. Every individual victory is of utmost importance to the entire team's success.

Matmen establish Sectionals as goal; acquire skills,

Utilizing a version of the half-nelson pinning combination, Steve Elonzae works hard to secure a victory via a pin during the season's initial encounter. Having already accredited Elonzae with two points for a predicament, the referee watches the action for further developments.

In first period action, Elmhurst's Laune Mason squares off with his South Side adversary. Mason's prime objective is to take his opponent down on the mat and gain a controlling position.

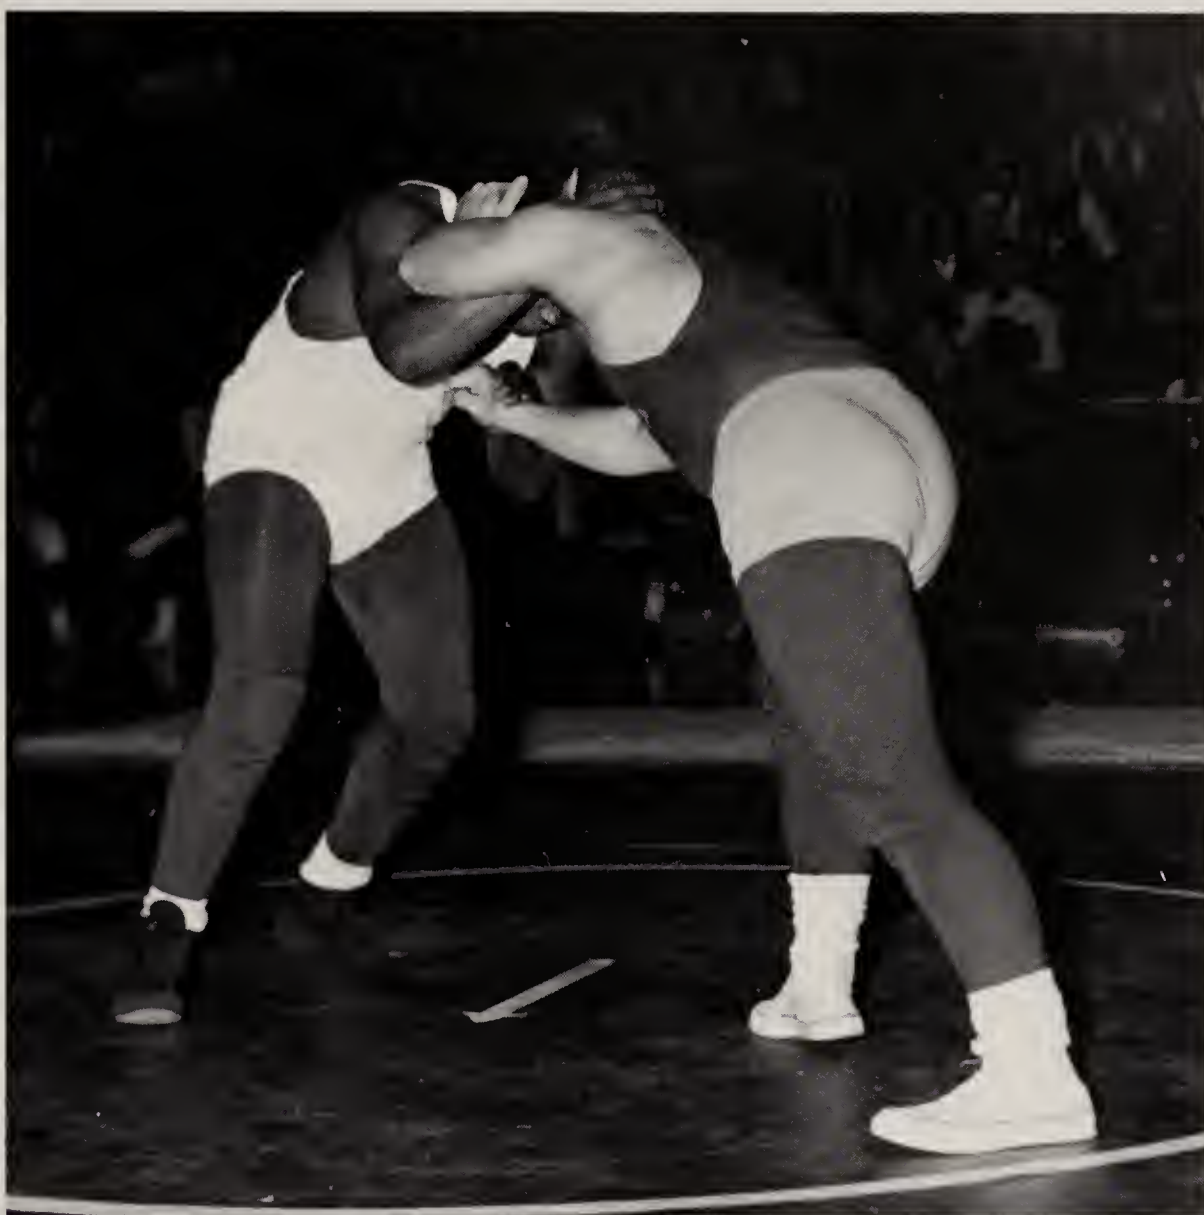

Trojan grappler Bob Guidrey applies a cross-face to his South Side foe as he attempts to avoid a takedown.

strength, agility through desire in seasonal matches

By maintaining a firm grip on his opponent, Steve Quance thwarts an attempted reversal.

Stalking his Central opponent, Senior Dave Carter contemplates which course of action will best enable him to procure a takedown. A successful attempt adds two points to Carter's victory margin.

Always seeking an opportunity for a pinning combination, 120-pounder Dale Bender applies an effective tight waist and breaks a Snider opponent down into a more advantageous position.

Starting a sit-out, junior Bob Guidrey struggles for a reversal over his Central rival.

Elmhurst captures four firsts at Bloomington Relays

Junior Jim Routhier tries to surpass his previous best performance in the long jump.

Trojan trackmen, coach anticipate tremendously rewarding '67 season

Breaking the tape, Trojan Paul Grotrian finishes well ahead of his nearest competitor at New Haven as he shows the exhaustion of running the 440 on the Bulldogs' all-weather track.

Exerting his final finishing effort, senior Harry Ausderan completes a race.

Good exchanges are a vital part of relays.

Missing occasionally is also a part of track. Greg Miller shows one of his few misses on the high jump grabbing the crossbar on his way over it during an intra-squad track meet at Elmhurst.

Men of Troy overpower Snider at North Side track by 75½—63½ score

Possibilities of an outstanding track season were high as all but three members of last year's varsity track team returned for another season of competition. Included among those were such stand-outs as Mike Wismer, Russ Bush, Paul Grotrian, Doug Finlayson, Bart Baker, John Capin, John Haynes, Galen Brown, Jim Gerichs, Rick Hoopes, and Steve Heaston, as well as many more who promised to contribute heavily to the team's performances.

Prospects began practice early in January, working in the gym and outside. The tempo of the work-outs increased as the cindermen prepared for their first competition.

In the Bloomington Relays, prior to the outdoor season, Elmhurst forces were among the top performers in the state field. Trojan relay teams placed first in four of their five divisions and individuals also turned in top performances. Distance races, dashes, and hurdles appeared to be strong for the team as these events were filled with many good runners.

Sophomore hurdler Ron Grotrian puts forth his best effort and takes flight in an intra-squad meet at Elmhurst. Despite these efforts he didn't win the event, but finished in second place.

Senior Mike Wismer stretches his legs out and starts the incline over the hurdle in an intra-squad meet at Elmhurst determined to better his previous high mark. He went on to win this race and also holds the record for the high hurdles which he set as a junior last year.

Good pole-vaulting is a vital part of track demonstrated by senior pole-vaulter Bert Baker clearing the cross-bar with sufficient ease, showing good form and the necessary determination.

Senior, Larry Wilson, twists around in order to use an effective backhand against his opponent. Larry played well enough to earn himself one of the top positions on this year's team.

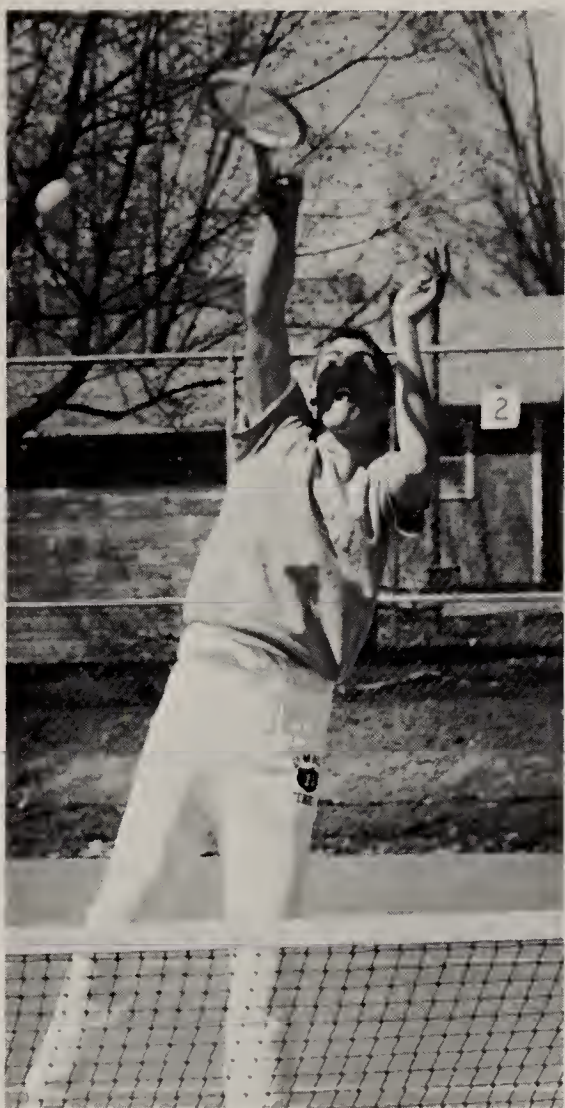

Coach Kurtz exhibits proper form in an early season practice at Waynedale.

Tennis squad faces tough competition in city play

TENNIS TEAM—KNEELING: Jim Lavengood, Brett Hemey, Mike Walley, Don Birdwell. STANDING: Coach Kurtz, John Grieser, Bruce

Working close to the net requires a long reach such as sophomore Steve Handy displays.

Gary Rickner, senior, lashes out in returning an opponent's serve. His white shirt and shorts are standard equipment and allow the free movement necessary for quick play.

The 1967 tennis season marks Elmhurst's fourth year in area competition. This year's racket squad hopes to continue the increasing success of past teams. Up until this season the team had only one coach, Mr. Kurtz, but this year Mr. Fishel took on the task of assisting him. Four seniors and one junior returned from last year but the five new men all played an important part in the team's victories.

Only two lettermen were lost from the team by graduation. With all returning strength and added new power the coaches looked forward to a winning season. Tennis being a relatively new sport at Elmhurst, the meets have not commanded a very impressive spectator record, but interest has improved with the team's success and the sport's future at Elmhurst seems secure and promising.

Backed up against the high fence, John Grieser, senior, makes a difficult return.

Every golfer desperately tries to avoid the water hazards; however, an occasional shot finds its way into the creek. Disgusted with his previous shot, Pete Clark searches for his ball.

Senior Steve Bower turns on the power and unleashes a long drive on the first hole.

Golfers invade links; set State Tournament as goal

Although sand traps add to the beauty of a golf course, they are sources of torment for many golfers. Linksman Dave Hall is confronted with the hazard as he blasts the ball onto the green.

The 1967 golf season promises to be a rewarding one for Elmhurst linksmen. Boasting one of the strongest teams in the city, the Trojan golfers are a threat to capture the City Championship. Host for the Sectional Tournament, the team also has a good chance to win the sectional trophy and to gain a State Championship berth.

Balance is the key to this year's squad. Seniors Steve Bower and Jerry Guebard, and junior Pete Clark shoot close to par. They are followed by seniors Dave Hall and Mark Feighner, juniors Ned Ewing and Art Daane, and sophomore Bruce Guebard who shoot in the high 30's and low 40's.

Coach Nicholas Werling, who enters his seventh year as golf coach, commented briefly, "We can go a long way this year, but it will take some hard work by the boys to get it done."

Graduation exercises provide glowing times for

SENIORS

The final moments of the year belonged to the senior. At this time, he felt a flood of contradicting emotions: new independence but strong ties with the past, confusion but self-confidence, sadness but anticipation, a sense of accomplishment but plans for the future.

The senior was a different person from the sophomore who entered Elmhurst three years earlier. He had gained in knowledge and maturity. He was now prepared to face the challenge of the future.

Standing in the shadow of a plane, senior homeroom secretaries Steve Nail, Claudia Bolyard, Steve Yentes, Steve Parrot, Ruth Fralick, Russ Bush, Sue Smith, Mary Thieme, and Cathy Brown symbolize hope in the future shown by the class of '67. Absent are Judi Cross and Barb Parkison.

Melancholy seniors realize that friends must part, knowing their separate paths will not frequently intersect.

Joan Kaufman teases Fred Straus about his predicament caused by wintry weather.

Heavy snows resulting in missed school days, stranded cars, and annoying colds caused numerous headaches for Trojans. Fred Strauss, senior, is aided by underclassmen as they push his car out of the snow.

More responsible now, seniors are still teenagers,
spirited, fun-loving,
a little reluctant to give up the carefree years.

Mike Downie realizes that keeping the coke machine well stocked is a time consuming job when there are fellow students like Steve Muha emptying it as fast as he can fill it.

Will Hausman, Jerry Guebard, Fred Strauss and Larry Wilson discuss housing facilities, scholarship opportunities and application procedures with a visiting college representative.

Last days as a class cause seniors to sense the meaning of little things unnoticed which are now cherished memories.

An exceptional Senior Class led the Trojan student body this year. Top scholars felt a moment of pride and satisfaction as they received their rewards for a sparkling three year career at Elmhurst.

Caryl Antalis earned the coveted title of valedictorian of the Class of 1967. Ranking second highest John Zavitz achieved the honor of being salutatorian.

Forty-six deserving graduates were inducted into the National Honor Society. Their Honor Society pins marked them as intelligent, capable, and outstanding teens.

A record number of 20 journalists became honored members of the Quill and Scroll Society.

Receiving high scores on the National Merit tests were 10 seniors. Five of them became National Merit semi-finalists and finalists.

Moments of decision, sharing, and growth are faced by

UNDERCLASS

Trojan underclassmen filled this year with moments of preparing for the decision-making senior year and graduation. The sophomores spent their time getting adjusted to life at Elmhurst. New horizons were opened to them in academic and social activities.

The juniors grew in responsibility and scholarship as they assumed positions of importance in Elmhurst society. With one year behind them, they were able to contribute to this Trojan year.

Dreams materialize as graduation closes year

Graduation brings the finale to the past 12 years of the senior's life. Each student left with a diploma in his hand, a hope and a dream in his mind.

He advanced to follow the path he had chosen. Some decided to attend college, some to start a working career. Many boys went into the service. But wherever they went, Elmhurst graduates represented well their high school and their generation.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Moments made the year . . . and moments of concentrated thought, nerve-racking frustration, and final satisfaction made this book.

All of the pages have been filled with captured memories, and we want to take one more moment to thank everyone who helped produce the 1966-67 Anlibrum.

A mental pat on the back goes to Mr. Lemish, our adviser, for his guidance, to the staff for its co-operation, and to all for their long hours of work resulting in lost sleep and missed suppers. We especially appreciate the work of our photographers Mark Ross and Rex Gray.

To Mr. Eickhoff, the administrators, and faculty, we are grateful for tolerating class interruptions, numerous questions, and flustered homeroom agents.

Recognition goes to Mr. James Arthur, consultant with American Yearbook Company, our publisher in Hannibal, Missouri; Mr. Paul Watters and Mr. John Doll, photographers from Watters Studio, Fort Wayne; Mr. Jerry Crim, photographer from Indiana School Pictures, and S. K. Smith Company for manufacturing the cover.

We particularly value the work of the business staff, which enabled us to attend the Ball State University Yearbook Workshop last summer. There we acquired the new ideas and styles employed in this book.

Our theme is an excerpt from a poem by Edward Young. We used a double exposure picture on page 90 and a reflection picture on page 20 for special effects.
